KLING AND BILLIARDS

John Kling, formerly the greatest catcher in baseball, is now bidding for premier honors as a three-cushion billiard player. Kling, playing for Kansas City in the Interstate Billiard League, has been one of the sensations of the early contests. Playing away from home, he has astounded the experts by winning in Philadelphia and Buffalo.

He met with a setback at Cleveland, but continues to play fast and clever billiards. Kling has for years been one of the greatest pool players in the world, and since his retirement from baseball has devoted his time to billiards, improving his game until he promises to become one of the leading shortstops of the billiard world.

NO LUCK FOR ZIM

"I don't believe I could have any such luck," Heinie Zimmerman of the Chicago Cubs so expressed himself in New York in speaking of his chances to be traded to Manager McGraw.

"I don't think any fellow who has been brought up in New York has a chance of making any of the local teams," said Heinie. "If I lived in some town like Oskaloosa or any one of those faraway burghs I might stand a chance."

"Then again, if the Cubs wanted to transfer me to St. Louis it would be just my luck to have the deal go through."

Stagg's warriors get their final drill today for the Saturday battle with Wisconsin, on which depends, to a large extent, the Maroon hopes of another western Conference victory this year. The team pull out for Madison Friday.

A big band of rooters will give the University of Illinois eleven a send-off tonight when they head for Minneapolis for the struggle with the Gophers Saturday.

Women only will be admitted to a Kalamazoo, Mich., theater on the afternoon of Nov. 18, when Joe Mandot of New Orleans and Hal Stewart of Ft. Wayne, Ind., put on a four-round boxing bout. The idea is to prove to the women folks that fighting is really a nice parlor game. No admittance will be charged.

Charley White started training today for his bout with Freddie Welsh, lightweight champion, at Milwaukee, Nov. 9.

Yale's gridiron men are expected to spring some surprises Saturday in their battle with Colgate's squad. Coach Hinkey has had the eleven hard at several new plays.

The Princeton Tigers look better than ever right now and the reason is
